

"Evocative lifestyle imagery undermined by absent CTA hierarchy, vague brand messaging, and generic aspiration without conversion clarity."

CLIENT / CAMPAIGN

zero grid

INDUSTRY

Fashion & apparel

MODEL

Claude Haiku 4.5

PLATFORM

Landing page

PASS THRESHOLD

65/100

DATE

09/04/2026

No Fluff. Just Science.

Pre-flight creative analysis powered by behavioural science

CREATIVE

DIMENSION SCORES

Visual Hierarchy

52

The figure dominates visually but creates a passive focal point; brand logo on cap at top-right is too small and easily missed. No clear entry/exit path

3-Second Test

45

Fails to communicate core message. A viewer sees a moody lifestyle moment but cannot identify brand intent, product category, or call-to-action

CTA Strength

35

No visible CTA button, link, or text. Conversion path is entirely absent. Even if browsing below the fold exists, primary viewport lacks directional

Emotional Resonance

75

Strong emotional appeal: contemplation, solitude, achievement, freedom. The golden-hour lighting and vast landscape trigger aspirational feelings.

Clarity & Readability

48

No visible headline, body copy, or CTA text on landing page. Viewers cannot quickly understand what Zero Grid sells, why they should care, or

Behavioural Triggers

62

Escapism and aspiration are present (solitude, achievement, adventure). However, missing urgency triggers (scarcity, deadlines), social proof

Cognitive Load

70

Visual simplicity is a strength—single subject, calm colour palette, uncluttered composition. However, this minimalism becomes a liability

Brand Consistency

48

The Zero Grid logo (cap branding) is barely recognizable at this scale and placement. No visible brand colours, tagline, or visual signature

TOP FIXES

Critical

Add a prominent headline (e.g., 'Built for Every Summit') overlaid with high contrast at 30-40% from top. Ensure 18-24pt minimum size and left-aligned or centered for legibility.

Important

Insert a primary CTA button ('Shop Collection' / 'Discover Now') at 75-80% down page with 40-50px height, contrasting colour (e.g., white, gold, or brand colour), and clear typography.

Nice to have

Layer a secondary support line (tagline or value prop) below headline explaining what Zero Grid is or does—apparel, gear, mindset—in 2-3 words max to reduce cognitive friction.

ATTENTION ZONES

Figure & Cap Logo

1

Dominates visual field via contrast (dark silhouette vs. bright sky). Logo on cap is only brand marker but too small to register consciously. Viewer attention naturally drawn here first, but no conversion trigger follows.

Mountain Horizon & Sky

2

Golden-hour lighting creates emotional weight and aspirational mood. Holds attention passively but encourages contemplation rather than action. Risk of viewer getting lost in landscape beauty without anchor to brand/product.

Rocks & Foreground

3

Textural anchor grounds composition and hints at ruggedness/durability (relevant to apparel). Secondary attention zone but lacks integration with product messaging or CTAs.

ATTENTION MAP

Zones based on AI visual analysis — not pixel-level eye tracking

INDUSTRY BENCHMARKS — FASHION & APPAREL

WHAT TOP CAMPAIGNS ARE DOING

<cite index="1-1,1-8">2024-2025 fashion campaigns leverage celebrity ambassadors and narrative-driven creative, with debut campaigns from new creative directors creating cultural moments.</cite> <cite index="2-2">Creative directors partner with pioneering photographers and film directors to create playful campaigns that highlight each designer's spirit.</cite> <cite index="7-5,7-6">The best campaigns of 2024 succeeded in conveying powerful messages by blending style, setting, and storytelling, with a renewed focus on wearable designs and accessible narratives that resonate with increasingly discerning consumers.</cite>

REAL-WORLD EXAMPLES

1

Calvin Klein

Jeremy Allen White FW24

TECHNIQUE

<cite index="8-3,8-4,8-5">Celebrity-driven cultural moment pairing a high-profile actor with bold, sexy imagery that shifts the brand zeitgeist and creates ongoing partnership momentum.</cite>

WHAT YOU CAN LEARN

Zero Grid should anchor lifestyle imagery to a recognizable face, narrative arc, or explicit brand promise—emotion alone without celebrity or clear product benefit underperforms for D2C conversion.

2

Prada

Act Like Prada SS25

TECHNIQUE

<cite index="9-3,9-4,9-5">Multimedia approach featuring multiple character personas shot by Steven Meisel exploring plurality and self-expression through diverse styling, positioning the collection as a vehicle for identity exploration.</cite>

WHAT YOU CAN LEARN

Zero Grid could elevate the solitary figure by adding narrative captions, mood words, or multiple lifestyle vignettes showing how product works across different situations—move beyond single aspirational moment.

3

Guess Jeans

Evan Mock & Alana Champion SS25

TECHNIQUE

<cite index="2-21,2-22,2-23,2-24">Dual talent casting embodying Americana spirit through California countryside setting with tangible lifestyle props (classic car, pastoral landscape), making the brand universe relatable and product-adjacent.</cite>

WHAT YOU CAN LEARN

Introduce a human scale—cast talent, show clothing detail or styling, use location as proof of product durability or lifestyle fit—rather than abstract solitude. This grounds aspiration in achievable lifestyle.

THE GAP

Zero Grid's creative relies on pure emotional aspiration and mood without the CTA clarity, celebrity anchor, or explicit product/narrative integration that drives 2024-2025 fashion D2C conversion; industry leaders embed storytelling within conversion funnel architecture, not instead of it.